The Kremlin at Moscow.

Most travelers who undertake to describe the far-famed Kremlin convey a very inadequate conception of it, and very vague ideas exist in the minds of most readers concerning it. The common notion is that the Kremlin is a citadel, and that there is no other Kremlin except that of Moscow. Both these ideas, we are informed by a recent French writer, are erroneous. Every ancient and important Russian town has a fortified enclosure containing a church, which is the object of peculiar reverence—often several of them—a convent, a magazine for artillery, and some munitions of war. This ensemble they call a Kremlin. It is, in effect a fortress where the people concentrate all which constitutes their strength; their religion, their archives and their arms. Treasures of the most important and interesting nature have accumulated at Moscow in this triple connection. The most interesting description of the Kremlin we have recently met with is from the pen of the editor of the American Agriculturist, who writes from Moscow as follows:

Near the center of the city is the far famed Kremlin. This is a semi-circular space, enclosed by a high wall nearly 1½ miles in length, surmounted with curiously shaped towers, a hundred yards or so apart, besides which there are five large gateways. Within this wall are the three ancient palaces, the treasury building, four gorgeous churches, the higher tower of Ivan Veliki, (John the Great,) at the foot of which is the Great Bell or Tsar Kolokol, (Tsar of bells). Within the Kremlin, also, is the arsenal, around the outside walls of which are arranged over 800 cannons, the trophies of war—a larger part of them taken from or left behind by Napoleon; the Senate House, some smaller buildings, and paved open spaces fill up the rest of the Kremlin. The treasury building contains an immense amount of curiously mingled gold and silver plate and precious stones, presented by the sovereigns of many nations, the crowns, and thrones, and regal insignia, not only of ancient and modern Russia, but of captured and subjugated nations, as Poland, Kazan, etc. The larger one of the three palaces, built by the late Emperor Nicholas, excels even the palaces of St. Petersburg and Paris, in the gorgeous decorations of some of its larger rooms. Of the four Kremlin churches, the Cathedral of Assumption, where all the emperors of Russia have been crowned, is the most noted. Its walls, its ceilings, and even its interior columns, are entirely covered with richly gilded paintings, most of them full size portraits of prelates of the church, saints, and scripture characters. Standing within the great nave one has peculiar sensations when he finds himself thus gazed upon, from every point above and around, by so many renowned personages, whose real portraits is so well represented by the artist's brush and pencil. In the second church, St. Michael's Cathedral, the main floor is largely occupied with the tombs of the Emperors down to Peter the Great, since which time they have been buried at St. Petersburg. In the third the Cathedral of the Annunciation, the Czars have long been baptized and married. The floor is paved with jasper and agate. In the fourth church, the Metropolitan, is manufactured the holy oil which is distributed throughout the empire, and which is used in the baptism of every child born in the Greek or National Church. In this cathedral, also, is shown a great number of robes, miters, diadems, etc., wrought with costly pearls, diamonds, and other precious stones of untold value. One robe alone contains over 50 pounds weight of these precious stones and gems. These few items must suffice to give you a faint idea of the immense treasures contained in the Kremlin. The great bell is worthy of its name and fame. It is now raised upon a circular stone wall, five feet high. Its proportions are perfect, its height over 20 feet, and I measured 68 feet around its base. (To get a full idea of its size, drive down a center stake, and with a cord 11 feet long, as a radius, mark out a circle 22 feet across. A 20-feet pole, set up in the center, will help the conception of its great size.) It weighs 444,000 pounds, or 222 tons! A fragment about 7 feet high and 6 feet wide, is broken out of the rim, and stands down against the wall, so that by climbing upon the wall, one can walk in through "the crack in the bell" as it is called. The Ivan Veliki tower, from which one has a good view of all the city, contains 40 bells, one of them half the size of the great bell, and others of somewhat smaller proportions. The chiming of only six of these of medium size, produced painful emotions in our heads, and gave a benumbing jar to the whole body. Some distance outside the Kremlin wall is ... the old city wall, and beyond this the city extends two or three miles each way from the center. There is everywhere an odd commingling of spacious public and private edifices, and the ... sheds of the poor. Log structures neatly framed and trimmed at the corners, however, are frequently found within the city. There is everywhere an ancient air and slowness of movement, with beggars and people in rags ... ly frequent at quite different from the thrift and industry visible at St. Petersburg."

Views of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The public debt of the Federal Government bears so heavily on all citizens, that every annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury, even if poorly written, must be a very interesting document; but Mr. McCulloch's reports are attractive by the excellence of their style, the boldness of their opinions, and the weight of their arguments, as well as by the importance of the subject; and his last report is perhaps more impressive than any that has preceded it. Upon the proposition to pay off the bonds in greenbacks he is especially emphatic. He says:

"But the Government has no United States notes in the Treasury, and as the annual receipts are not likely hereafter to be much in excess of the expenditures, and as a new loan to raise money for the purpose of violating an agreement under which a previous loan was negotiated would be impracticable, there would be no way in which the bonds now redeemable could be paid as has been proposed, except by putting the printing presses again at work, and issuing more promises, which must themselves eventually be paid in coin, converted into coin bonds, or repudiated. This process of making money seems an easy one, but our own experience, and the experience of every other nation that has tried it, proved to be neither judicious nor profitable. As the paper circulation of the country is already redundant, it would be lessened in value by every addition to it, and, by the distrust thus created, its depreciation would doubtless be in a greater ratio even than the additions would bear to the volume to which they would be added. It is not too much to say, that an additional issue of five hundred millions of United States notes would reduce the seven hundred millions of paper money now in circulation, to one-half their present value; so that a legal tender note or a National Bank note, now worth seventy per cent. in coin, would not be worth more than thirty-five per cent., even if the apprehension of further issues did not place it on a par with Confederate notes at the collapse of the rebellion. The bonds would of course decline in value with the currency in which they would be payable. Can any one seriously propose thus to depreciate, if not to render valueless, the money and securities of the people? Can any one, knowing the effect which such an issue would have upon the Government bonds, upon the currency now afloat, upon business, upon credit, upon the public morals, seriously advocate such a measure, not as a matter of necessity, but to anticipate the payment of debts due many years hence? The statement of the proposition exposes its wickedness. When fairly considered, it cannot fail to be stamped with universal condemnation. It is a proposition that the people of the United States, who own four-fifths of the national obligations, shall, by their own deliberate act, rob and ruin themselves, and at the same time cover the nation with inexpressible and ineffaceable disgrace."

GEN. SHERMAN ON SLAVERY.—In his St. Louis address, Gen. Sherman said:

Slavery would surely have been extinguished in this country by a gradual and natural process, and we might have been spared our civil war, had not other causes come into play. It was found that the soil and climate of the Southern States were admirably adapted to the growth of cotton. The power of steam was discovered and applied to machinery of all kinds, especially in Old and New England, and Eli Whitney, of Massachusetts invented his cotton gin. [illegible] in America.

The [illegible]ionists and repudiators in the great Western States are nominating their champion, George H. Pendleton for the Presidency. There is a fitness in this, both because Pendleton was a [illegible] when the nation was [illegible] for its existence, and also because he is [illegible] of the scheme to virtually repudiate the [illegible]. When rebellion was threatening the overthrow of our system of Government, Pendleton's views, as expressed by himself in a speech in Congress, were these: "My voice is for conciliation; my voice is for compromise. I beg of you, gentlemen, who with me [illegible] the North-West, to hear that voice. If [illegible] will not, if you find conciliation impossible, [illegible] let the seceding States depart in [illegible] establish their Government and [illegible], and work out their destiny according to [illegible] which God has given them." These [illegible] of a Representative in Congress, who had sworn to support the Constitution, declared at a time when a gigantic rebellion [illegible] and the Government was engaged in an agonizing struggle to maintain [illegible] and preserve its life. Pendleton [illegible] in Congress, until he was [illegible] and repudiated by his constituents [illegible] with these [illegible]. All his acts in Congress and out of Congress were devoted to the work of embarrassing and crippling the Government in the war [illegible]. In August, 1861, he [illegible] President Lincoln [illegible] to quell the rebellion, were [illegible] power. In February, [illegible] officers of the army to [illegible] to their rebel owners; in [illegible] he voted against a bill to provide [illegible] the Government and pay [illegible] in May, 1862, he [illegible] the insurgents; in December, 1863, he voted [illegible] submitted by Green Clay Smith, [illegible] that the only hope [illegible] was by prosecuting the war [illegible] should be found in arms against [illegible] in January, 1864, he voted [illegible] tion, and through the [illegible] all measures for [illegible] of the [illegible] power and the [illegible] of the Government. [illegible] a representative [illegible] Copperhead Democ[illegible] of the North, he should be nominated. [illegible] the originator of the [illegible] the debt by means of deprecia[illegible] supports that scheme. [illegible] him for that bad [illegible] it may be doubtful whether [illegible] can be no [illegible]. But it [illegible] that in New York and New England Democrats [illegible] more "conservative" than [illegible] for Pendleton [illegible] Democrats there are. [illegible] Pendleton and his friends [illegible]. Even Seymour has declared [illegible] repudiators; [illegible] to obtain [illegible] Convention, he will be [illegible] from the National Convention.

[illegible] of which Pendleton is [illegible] and principal champion, [illegible] the [illegible] of property. [illegible] this is the form in [illegible]. The leaders who propose [illegible] as the poor [illegible] against the rapacity of the [illegible] may therefore be incited to [illegible] the property class. They [illegible] were an ignorant [illegible] in the country and who [illegible] circumstances, knaves, [illegible] not so despicable [illegible]. Is it [illegible] view of the masses of the Democ[illegible] take, in supposing [illegible] for the character of the [illegible] in the honor of the country; that they are insensible to considerations of public faith, national honesty [illegible] character among the [illegible] of the world? This is the estimate which the Democratic leaders have [illegible] the character of their followers. They [illegible] address them as if they were in the condition of proletaries who could be [illegible] only by [illegible] to the meanest feelings and [illegible].

In [illegible] to incite the masses against the [illegible] of property, the student of history [illegible] with its resemblance to the [illegible] principle of Jacobinism, as developed in [illegible] at the close of the last century. The Democratic leaders who have adopted Pendleton's [illegible] also to have adopted the maxim of Mirabeau, that "there are but "three ways of living in society: you must either be a beggar, a robber, or a [illegible]," which are in reality [illegible], and that one animated by a design against the property class. Burke characterized Jacobinism as "a revolt of the enterprising talents of a [illegible] against its property;" a definition which with a very little alteration, would accurately describe the Democratic movement to get rid of the national debt. Babeuf, one of the actors in the French [illegible], declared that "real aristocracy consists [illegible]. The people are excluded from [illegible] share in the property of the [illegible] — the people should alone be [illegible] with it, and that, too, in equal shares. [illegible] no real equality without an equality of [illegible]." The principles of Pendleton and his [illegible], when pushed to their legitimate consequences, are precisely those of Babeuf. The [illegible] Democratic talk about an "aristocracy of bond holders," is simply the manifestation of a [illegible] of Jacobinism. Proudhon, a later French writer, has set forth these principles in a very sententious manner by declaring that "property is a crime." This is precisely the view of the Ohio, Indiana and Oregon Democrats. Their expressions of hostility toward the holders of our national securities afford a clear index to the principles by which their political action is guided.

Union Meeting at Silverton.

EDITOR OREGONIAN:

There was a meeting of Union Club No. 1 of Silverton Precinct, held at Liberty School House, in the Waldo Hills, on the evening of the 8th inst., which was a complete success. The house was crowded with men and women, notwitstanding the inclemency of the weather. The meeting was called to order by R. C. Geer, President of the club, and after listening to the "Union Forever," sung by the Glee Club, was addressed by W. R. Dunbar for three quarters of an hour in a very able manner, ending with an appeal to Union men to stand firm to the principles that have preserved the nation, and a glowing tribute to the memory of the murdered Lincoln, followed by another song from the Glee Club, entitled at "Half-Mast." Appropriate speeches were made by Rice Dunbar, Eph Cranston, R. C. Geer and K. L. Hibbard.

A recess was then had and we proceeded to discuss several baskets of chickens, cakes, pies, &c., prepared by the ladies of the neighborhood. Two large, very beautiful and delicious cakes with various devices upon their faces, were presented by Mrs. Calvin Geer and Miss Eglantine DeHart, and received by the meeting with three rousing cheers to the donors.

One Democrat joined the club, bidding farewell to the rebel Democracy. After several more patriotic songs by the Glee Club, consisting of Messrs. Leonard, Thompson, Edmondson, Hibbard and Misses Della and Libbie Dunbar and Miss Carrie Hibbard, and three hearty cheers for General Grant, adjourned.

The editor of the New England Palladium, published at Boston in 1601, introducing a long original poem entitled "Columbia," says: "Although a newspaper is not the most flattering vehicle for an author still it is better than a manuscript, and the best which the country at present affords." How different a state of things does this remark reveal from that which now exists after the lapse of little more than half a century! Then we had no magazines and few books; now our periodical literature ranks with that of Europe, and the issue of new books is unceasing; then it was thought derogatory to an author to appear in the columns of a newspaper; now much of our highest literature finds its widest circulation through this medium, and our best writers make it the vehicle of their productions. The newspaper has become a power in literature as well as in politics and social reform.

Johnson finds it impossible to discover a General of any considerable merit or distinction who will support his "policy." He removed Pope a short time ago because that officer had too little respect for the rebel friends of the Administration, and sent Gen. Meade to take his place. Almost the first act of the hero of Gettysburg is to dismiss the rebel Governor Jenkins from office. A. Johnson and his friends have many tribulations.

Jacob Bright, brother of the great orator, has been elected to the English Parliament from Manchester.

Oregon's El Dorado.

The Salem Record gives the following version of a familiar story:

Some time since we published, from the Herald, a very interesting story of the pretended discoveries of Stephen Meek, the pilot of the unfortunate emigrant train that undertook, in 1845, to cross from the Malheur river over the Blue Mountains, and then to proceed down the waters of the Des Chutes river to the Columbia—an undertaking that was accomplished after much difficulty and suffering. Meek, our readers will remember, claims to have prospected over this old route faithfully for years past, and finally has found the far famed placers which the emigrants of that year have left a tradition of, in the well-authenticated story that nuggets were found, though not recognized as gold then, which were hammered on the wagon tires. Mr. Meek says he has found more nuggets, has sunk a prospecting hole, and found gravel that had immense pay in it, and is going back in the spring to lay in a good supply. He also told of a lake which makes its appearance at long periods, so that in his trips between 1837 and 1867, sometimes he saw it, and sometimes he did not. It must be a little joker of gigantic dimensions. This has called forth "a round, unvarnished tale" from the very individual who picked up the only nugget found on that memorable journey.

Leaving Snake river at the Owyhee, the emigration crossed the sandy ridges to where Willow creek empties into the Malheur river, and took its way up Willow creek over the Blue Mountains, following the path in part made by Fremont the year before. When the summit, south of where now lie the mines of John Day and Powder river, and where hostile Indians now have full occupancy, two young men, while hunting stock a couple of miles from camp, found in the bed of a small stream a nugget of gold weighing about two ounces. It was picked from a crevice of the solid ledge or bed-rock. They did not recognize it for gold, and thought it some piece of metal lost by Fremont's men, as they were then but a mile distant from one of his camping spots. It was taken to camp, examined, hammered on a wagon tire, probably, thrown into the tool box of one of the wagons and not heard of afterwards.

This was the only thing like gold found by the train. There was no chance for much pay dirt, as the bed-rock was in view. When in mining districts afterwards, these gentlemen recognized the fact that they once found gold in the Blue mountains, but they never thought it a sufficient inducement to return in search of the place, though they think it could easily be found again. No one doubts that there are paying mines south of Canyon City and Auburn, but many prospecting parties, during the last few years, have visited this region without success.

The story of the lake, our informant thinks unreasonable; as in all the course of the eventful expedition he believes no spot could be found to locate a lake sixty miles long and keep it there over night.

It only remains for us to assure our readers that our information comes from one of the most responsible and reliable citizens of Marion county, whose word no man will doubt. His recollection of every incident of the journey is vivid; he can describe every day's drive, and every camping place; he was one of the two who discovered the two-ounce nugget, and his name will be forthcoming when his statements are denied.

OLD NEWSPAPERS.—We are indebted to Rev. J. F. Roberts for several numbers of the Federal Gazette, published at Philadelphia, in 1789. The papers are curiosities, as compared with the issues of 1868, both as to style of composition and their mechanical make-up. We find the dates at the head of the paper put up in this style: "Tuesday, 21th July;" "Philadelphia, 21 July;" "Philadelphia, 10 September," etc. The following editorial cut was upon the occasion of the vote in the House of Representatives to make Philadelphia "the temporary residence of Congress," will sound oddly to the readers of the present day. The editor was evidently not altogether a prophet nor the son of one:

"With what exulting pride must every American citizen behold the deliberations of the house of representatives—where candor and disinterestedness are not only professed, but acted—where localities are despised—where partial interests have no influence—where the common good is the goal to which each patriot presses with rival speed. Our commercial regulations have been made with the most scrupulous impartiality. The most prompt provision was made to secure peace to the distant extremes of our empire. And in the establishment of the permanent seat of our government, not only present considerations have been regarded, but the most remote contingencies that may be. The Susquehanna has been wisely selected being in the centre of the present wealth and population of the United States, and likely to continue so for ever, when we anticipate either the future junction of the British colonies, or the probable secession of the western territory, both which events the keen-sighted eye of the wise politician will foresee and regard—and so select the spot that no future change may be necessary, that no waste of the treasure drawn from the hard hand of the laborious citizen may be permitted. With rapturous joy we foresee the stability of our government, and the extension of our dominion—in this impartial and wise decision. The latest remnant of posterity will adore the wisdom of their forefathers, who could look so deep into futurity. And we already are on an unexplored and disregarded spot in the map of America, a new Rome, the seat of the world, the patron of science and the arts, the dispenser of freedom, justice and peace to unborn millions rising to our views. Who does not admire the noble self denial of the patriotic founders of our future glory and happiness—they disregard present convenience and only take into view the lasting and permanent interests of their country."

Notwithstanding the rodomontade of the above, the tone of the paper was generally dignified, staid and didactic. It was Federal in politics, as its title would indicate, and its standing motto was taken from Gen. Washington's circular letter: "Whatever measures have a tendency to dissolve the Union, or contribute to violate or lessen the sovereign authority, ought to be considered hostile to the liberties and independence of America."

A dip into one of the musty old columns gives us the following view of the "state of the Union," seventy-nine years ago:

"It appears from the public papers from all quarters, that the states are more and more coalescing under the new government: Their respective Legislatures and Judiciaries are taking and subscribing the oath to support the new constitution: And the people are turning their eyes to its benign operations as to their hope and confidence. Recent accounts state, that NORTH CAROLINA and RHODE ISLAND will very soon come into the federal family."

In all the numbers of the Gazette sent us—four—there is not enough original matter in the aggregate, to fill one column of the DAILY OREGONIAN, though what there is was written by a vigorous thinker and a person of evident education. The matter is mostly compiled from exchanges, letters of correspondents and general news of the day. There are but two or three local items in the four numbers. The people of that slow-coach age evidently were satisfied with less of the current local gossip than is now demanded of newspaper conductors. It was the golden age for editors. A little stilted writing, and the labors were done.

SHIP BUILDING IN OREGON.—The following is furnished us by a ship carpenter of this city. His suggestions are worthy of attentive and earnest consideration: "After reading your article on ship-building on the Pacific coast, I will venture to make a few suggestions on the same subject. I am glad to see that our California neighbors are beginning to learn the advantage that will most assuredly be derived from this business. I am well aware that nine-tenths of those who have undertaken it on this coast have been largely remunerated for their investment and some of them have been made independent. As I have been brought up in a ship-building country, I profess to be something of a judge on the subject both in its administration and the material necessary for the same. We all know that this business is extensively carried on in Washington Territory at the present time, and I cannot see why it can't be carried on with profit at this end of the line. There are now several large vessels building on Puget Sound; one at Port Madison, is about six hundred tons, old measurement. They pay there from $12 to $20 per 1,000 feet for the lumber necessary for that business, and I say that there can be just as good lumber furnished at Portland for the same price. They pay their ship carpenters four dollars per month; workmen can be got here for the same price. They get their frame lumber and spars at the cost of cutting and towing to the yard; they can be got here for the same price, and I think that we have just as good cutting and towing facilities as on Puget Sound. Our tide land spruce for frame timber and our fir spruce and yellow fir for planking and spars cannot be beaten in the world. This cry of Oregon lumber being inferior to that of Puget Sound, is the hight of folly; it is all prejudice. There is not one carpenter out of a thousand in California, that will ever ask, "is your lumber from Puget Sound or Oregon?" and "what is the difference in the price?" Let this cry of inferior lumber be refuted. There are plenty of ship carpenters in this country who have worked in California. They and our mill men will refute it. Give our mill men an order for ship-building lumber, and see if they don't refute it. ... Oak Point, West's Mills and Astoria lumber, [illegible] by any lumber in California. Abbott & Co., of St. Helens, are now about shipping their first cargo to California, and my belief is that it will be as good as the best, as Abbott is well posted and is gradually up to time at the business. I see by their articles of incorporation, that they are awake to the advantage that can be derived from ship-building, as it is mentioned in that article. If it is profitable to build vessels on the Sound and to own them in California—why not at Portland? Our producers is increasing so rapidly that some of our merchants have been large losers for want of vessels to carry their produce during the last year. Several new manufactories have sprung up of late, and many more are in contemplation that will add largely to our exports. The Oswego Iron Works and Knapp, Burrell & Co.'s Cement Works, when fairly started, will keep two or three vessels employed all the time and many more if run to their full capacity."

DEATH OF GEN. STEELE.—A private dispatch from San Francisco, received yesterday, by Mr. B. Goldsmith, of this city, makes the sad announcement that Brevet Major General Frederick Steele, lately in command of this Military Department, is no more. He died at San Francisco on Sunday, the 12th inst., of apoplexy. When he left us (here) but a few short weeks ago, he was in vigorous health and bounding spirits, full of animation at the prospect of shortly joining his relatives and friends at the East, from whom he had been separated almost constantly since the first stirring events of the rebellion called him into the field. This announcement of his sudden death will strike heavily upon the hearts of his old comrades in arms, and throw a shadow of gloom upon the spirits of the many warm friends he had gathered about him from the walks of civil life. Upon being relieved of duty as Commandant of the Department of the Columbia, he received an extended leave of absence, intending to spend a portion of the time in California, where, we believe, he has a brother residing, and then to proceed to New York. Death, however, in the first weeks of his furlough has mustered him out of the service, and now Gen. Steele lives only in history and the hearts of his fellow-soldiers and friends. He was born in Delhi, Delaware Co., N. Y.; was graduated at West Point in 1843, and received a commission as 2d Lieutenant in the regular army, 2d Reg. Infantry. He served under Gen. Scott in the Mexican war, and was breveted 1st Lieutenant and then Captain, for gallant and meritorious conduct at the battles of Contreras and Chapultepec. At the taking of the City of Mexico he was present and in command of his Company. Subsequently, in the disposition of the officers of that war, he was ordered to California where he was on duty for a long time as Gen. Riley's Adjutant. At the beginning of the rebellion in 1861, he was ordered to Missouri where he soon attained the rank of Major in the 11th U. S. Infantry. For gallant services at Wilson's Creek, August 10th, 1861, he was made a Brigadier-General of Volunteers, dating from Jan. 29th, 1862. From that time, through the campaigns of the West, his life and services belonged to, and made a part of, the public history of the country.

SOMETHING FOR THE ENGINES TO DO.—We have frequently heard it suggested that the steam fire engine companies might confer a favor upon the skating public—that includes nearly everybody, now—by taking their engines down to the North pond and setting them to work flooding the ice, for a new surface. A few hour's work, it is thought, would cover the pond with water, which, when frozen, would give a new and smooth surface. As at present, the ice is so much cut up as to be nearly ruined for anything like fine skating. There are, too, large sections spoiled by the ice-cutters. Mr. Sutton, the foreman of No. 4, expresses a willingness to put his engine in service for the purpose mentioned above, if the skaters will pay the necessary expense. We feel confident that more than double the sum required could be readily obtained among the visitors at the pond, almost any afternoon. Who will undertake to start the enterprise?

COMMON HONESTY.—We are just in receipt of a little pamphlet of sixteen pages, entitled "Common Honesty; a Sermon preached in the Congregational Church, Salem, Oregon, November, 1867, by P. S. Knight, Pastor." We have not had time to read the sermon, but we like the title and the subject. Common honesty is so much the superior, as compared with the elaborated and refined article and, withal, so much the scarcer of the two, that a sermon on it must necessarily have some novelties and convey some new impressions to most hearers. We think we shall try to find time to read Bro. Knight's sermon and, if as we shall expect, we find it calculated to aid in restoring the genuine, home-made, common honesty to common use again, we will draw upon it as something new even in sermonizing.

A "SELL."—One of the employes at the telegraph office, or some other man—a wag at all events—getting tired, we suppose, of replying to the thousand and one inquiries after the steamer, yesterday posted on a bulletin board in front of the office, the following notice: "Str. Oriflamme started at 2 o'clock P. M. from ... by the trail." Everybody, of course, stopped to read the bulletin. About half the number saw the point and laughed; the other half went away congratulating themselves that the steamer had been heard from, at last, and that she might be expected about this evening.

BASE BALL—A FIZZLE.—An attempt was made to play a game of nine innings, yesterday afternoon on the ice. The nines were chosen, the game began and progressed in fine style through two innings for each side, but in the third inning, so many of the players were absent gallanting the ladies about, the game could not go on and so the attempt ended in a fizzle. Skating is king now and summer sports must wait.

STOPPED WORK.—The Oregon Iron Works were idle yesterday, in consequence of their hydrants being frozen up, thus cutting off their supply of water for the steam boilers.

U. S. CIRCUIT COURT—DEADY, JUSTICE.—Monday, Jan. 13th:

Fields vs. Squires; in equity. The day was taken up in the argument of this cause by Hill for defendant and Chapman for complainant. Page will conclude the argument to-day.

J. B. Upton admitted to the bar.

A NEW CATHOLIC CHURCH.—On Sunday a meeting of the members of the Catholic Church of this city, was held, at which it was resolved that the erection of a new church building should be undertaken, and about $4,000 was pledged toward the expense. The present intention is to erect a building to cost about $50,000.

A FAILURE.—The attempt to send a military express to the country east of the mountains, resulted in a failure. The messengers returned yesterday, reporting the trail impracticable for animals. The frozen and slippery condition of the trail, probably accounts for the non-arrival of an express messenger from the Dalles.

YOUNG MEN'S LAW AND LITERARY ASSOCIATION.—At a meeting last evening, on motion of C. B. Upton, the Young Men's Law and Literary Association passed a vote of thanks to the Common Council of the City of Portland for the use of the Council rooms.

DR. OWENS, Portland: Sir: I have been in the habit of using the "HENLEY ROYAL BALSAM" in my family, who reside at Wallula, Walla Walla county, W. T. I am now at Olympia, attending the present session of the Legislature, and the climate is so different from that of Walla Walla county that I have taken cold, and I have endeavored to purchase some of the medicine here but was unable to do so. Please send a bottle up immediately by mail. I have used nothing else in my family and cannot get along without it. Yours truly,

DR. G. W. COOL,

DENTIST.

THOSE WHO DESIRE FIRST-CLASS DENTAL SERVICES might do well to give him a call. He is making a NEW AND IMPROVED VULCANITE PLATE. The nature of his improvement consists in lining the entire concave surface with fine gold; it makes the plate twice as strong and one-third times thinner than the common vulcanite plate. It also prevents the acids of the mouth from roughing the plate, and from turning it black, which is a common occurrence. One half of the common vulcanite plates turn black after being in use a short time, particularly where tobacco is used for smoking. His new style of plate admits of a very fine finish on the concave or palate surface. His office is the only place where such work can be had. The improvement is his own invention, for which he has received, December 3d, 1867, a patent from the United States Patent Office. He has been making this style of work for the last two and a half years, and has specimens of the work which can be seen at his office. This work has given satisfaction in every case.

PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER.

THE UNIVERSAL REMEDY FOR INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL COMPLAINTS!

At this period there are but few of the human race unacquainted with the merits of the Pain Killer; but while some extol it as a liniment, they know but little of its power in easing pain when taken internally, while others use it internally with great success, but are equally ignorant of its healing virtues when applied externally. We therefore wish to say to all that it is equally successful whether used internally or externally, and it stands alone, unrivalled by all the great catalogue of Family Medicines, and its sale is universal and immense. The demand for it from India and other foreign countries is equal to the demand at home, and it has become known in these far off places by its merits.

TAKE NO MORE UNPLEASANT AND UNSAFE REMEDIES for unpleasant and dangerous diseases. Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH.

The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise, which commands here, and in the markets of the interior, a relatively higher price, excites the cupidity of some manufacturers, and every day he sees increase the number of those who, by counterfeit or imitation of his mark, seek to deceive the public, palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G. HOSTETTER'S

CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS!

A Pure and Powerful Tonic,

Corrective and Alterative, of wonderful efficacy in Diseases of the STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS.

PROTECTIVE PROPERTIES.

Prevents Fever and Ague and Bilious Remittent Fever. Fortifies the System against Miasma and the evil effects of unwholesome Water. Invigorates the organs of digestion and the bowels; Steadies the Nerves and tends to Prolong Life.

REMEDIAL PROPERTIES.

Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Sick and Nervous Headache, General Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Sea Sickness, Cramps and Spasms, and all complaints of either sex arising from Bodily Weakness, whether inherent in the system or PRODUCED BY SPECIAL CAUSES.

NOTHING THAT IS NOT WHOLESOME, GENIAL, and restorative in its nature, enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind; no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant; but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants, with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated, and the appetite restored by this Tonic, and hence it is of great use in cases of Dyspepsia, and in less confirmed forms of Indigestion. Acting as a gentle and painless aperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the Constipation superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits, and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is conclusive, and from both sexes.

As a Genuine Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produces effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay, and Debility and Decrepitude arising from old age, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re-establish them.

Last, but not least, it is the only safe stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acrid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

No. 10 Blank Street.

A gentleman can be accommodated with a pleasant suit of rooms, at No. 10 Blank Street. The house contains all the modern improvements. References required.

The advertisement seemed to me to promise well. I was tired of my present home. For five years I had occupied the same rooms and the same seat at the table. The penny postman was not better known on his beat than I was on my way to dinner. I did not object to boarding houses. I was willing to eat baked beans on Sunday, but I wished to partake of them in a new locality. Blank street leads out of Beacon, therefore it must be genteel. Probably a suit of rooms there would be expensive, but I could afford to indulge myself a little. I was thirty-five, alone in the world, very well off, and doing a business which promised a speedy fortune. It was time I began to take life a little more on the sunny side.

I went to No. 10 Blank street on my way down. The landlady, Mrs. Lee, was a widow; handsome, stylish, apparently not more than thirty. I heard afterward that she would never see forty again; but as my informant was a boarder to whom she had been under the necessity of sending her "small bill" a second time, it was doubtless a malicious slander. She was a very attractive looking person, and I was at home with her at once. I had no sooner told her my name and business than she seemed well acquainted with me. She bowed and smiled.

"I shall be most happy to accommodate you, Mr. Prescott. This way, if you please."

Her black silk dress rustled before me up two flights of stairs. Her full light curls shook with a coquettish grace as she turned her head. The rooms were delightful—spacious and handsomely furnished. The terms were a little exorbitant—[illegible] I should have thought so had I been dealing with a man of business; but surely one would willingly pay a little trifle to sit at the same table with Mrs. Lee. Her family she assured me was of the most select description; some three or four single gentlemen of high standing, and as many gentlemen with their wives. To be sure she had been obliged to fill her attics with cheap boarders, as she could not afford to keep empty rooms; but they were quiet, and she trusted, no annoyance to any one.

I went there, bag and baggage, the next morning. I moved my pictures; I loved Art in a [illegible] fashion and I had some fine prints and a few choice oil paintings. When I had hung them up to my satisfaction, and put the bust of Clytie, the dreamy face I loved so well, on my mantle, I looked about my parlor with a serene satisfaction.

I met Mrs. Lee's family at dinner. Some of the gentlemen were business acquaintances of mine. The ladies seemed pleasant and companionable, and "all went merry as a marriage bell." Mrs. Lee did all the honors of her establishment [illegible] that I was more charmed with her than ever. I pitied the dead Thaddeus—I had seen his name in the family Bible because he [illegible] to resign so much youth and beauty, for she was but a young thing, she told me, when she was left to depend upon herself. [illegible] she said, had never been allowed [illegible] roughly. Mr. Lee had worshipped her as the Hindoo does his idol—I thought it an [illegible] and pleasant [illegible] died [illegible], and in some way she was defrauded of all his property, and had been [illegible] ever [illegible] of herself. But, then she said, [illegible] with tears still in her eyes, every one had [illegible] kind to her—she had found friends everywhere. Who could help being ready to befriend one so lovely and so winning? I thought, as I [illegible].

Do not imagine all this confidence was bestowed [illegible] at our first meeting. It came out gradually. I got into the habit of lounging for half [illegible] for an hour in the evening in the [illegible] parlor, of which she and I were often sole [illegible]. I certainly had no matrimonial [illegible] towards Mrs. Lee. I liked my freedom, and was determined to remain a bachelor; still I was interested in my landlady, and [illegible] [illegible] always hot, and my [illegible] and of tea alike sweet and full. "What a [illegible]" [illegible] should have, [illegible] Mrs. Lee, as I watched, [illegible] her nimble fingers—for she insisted on [illegible] it was but expressing a [illegible] of mine. I saw no call for my [illegible] though it was [illegible] becoming [illegible] nothing [illegible] but she [illegible] with a flutter of pretty [illegible].

"[illegible]" she sighed [illegible] "I made him so, and [illegible] do not love him, as he loved me. He was a great deal older than I, and I [illegible] to know what love [illegible] tender [illegible] we have seen much of life and learned what a [illegible] thing it is to have some one to care for [illegible]. But what am I saying? I am wasting [illegible] Your gloves are [illegible]."

She hurried out of the room. It was my turn to be [illegible]. Had I said anything to [illegible] memory of [illegible] and his ghost had [illegible] for her. I felt uncomfortable, and I be[illegible] to my own [illegible] I always left my [illegible] it was one of my old bachelor ways [illegible]. As I went up stairs [illegible] looking apparently with [illegible] at my Clytie. Her form [illegible] I did not see her face, but [illegible] of cheap material, and simply [illegible] I thought, "or [illegible] work."

When I approached her she turned and glanced [illegible] she faltered; "I was taking [illegible] but the face is so beautiful!"

"Do you [illegible]" I [illegible] retort—but I did not. I had had enough complimenting for one [illegible] She had a low, [illegible] of the [illegible] Clytie. Her [illegible] and blue, [illegible] the saddest, most [illegible] expression I ever met. [illegible] she could not [illegible] full red lips had [illegible] the looks of a grieved [illegible] I had seen and felt this in the instant my eyes met hers.

"[illegible] liberty!" I am rewarded for leaving [illegible] if it has afforded you any pleasure. I wish you would stop in a moment and look at my pictures. If you fancy the Clytie, I [illegible] would like some of them."

[illegible] was a singular absence of all prudery or [illegible] in the child. I suppose she saw in me [illegible] for so I must have [illegible] and she [illegible] a trust that was the most [illegible]. She came in unhesitatingly [illegible] for a few moments, while I told her [illegible] I could see the [illegible] of her [illegible] the expression of her countenance and [illegible] as she looked at them. [illegible] identity, strong love for beauty, [illegible] probably been starved all her life. It [illegible] to see the light grow and [illegible] in her great eyes, as she stood with that [illegible] parted lips, that I wished the [illegible] of the Louvre had been at my command. [illegible] had seen them all she thanked me in [illegible] way of hers.

"You have given me a [illegible] pleasure, sir. I [illegible] now; but I shall have something to think of which will [illegible] many a day's work easier."

"Do you live here, Miss——?"

"Hastings," she replied. My name is Nora Hastings. Yes, sir, I live here—up stairs. I breakfast and dine earlier than you do, and I sit at the [illegible]. It is not strange that you have never seen me, though of course I had seen Mr. Prescott the new boarder. Good evening, sir."

She moved from me up stairs as she spoke. It was not quite sunset, in the long summer days, and as she went up the rays struck through a side window, and kindled some gold lights in her brown, wavy hair and somehow my boyish fancies of Jacob's ladder, and the angels going up and down it, came into my mind, and I said to myself, "Heaven bless the child."

I [illegible] myself that I made use of a degree of diplomacy which would have done credit to the Chevalier Wykoff, in questioning the chamber-maid next morning. I had her in to dust my books, under my personal supervision, and I led her into conversation about several of the boarders. At length I asked:

"Was there any one in the house I could get to do [illegible] for me, did she think? Had I not heard of a Miss Hastings, who was a seamstress?"

"Perhaps so; but Miss Hastings did not do [illegible] as gentlemen wanted,"—with a hearty Irish laugh. "She does [illegible] dresses, and trims [illegible], and makes mantillas. Most likely this was [illegible]."

"Most likely it wasn't. But perhaps the young lady was not always busy. If she were out of work she might like to do what I want in her spare [illegible]."

Ellen thought she did not have any spare time. She made everything look so, beautifully that the ladies kept her always busy.

"And she's the rale lady herself," broke out the warm hearted Hibernian, in a gush of irrepressible panegyric. "She's so afraid of making any trouble, though sure I'd work my fingers to the bone to spare those white hands of hers. When I was sick and like to die with the fever, who but she took me into her room and nursed me, and sat up with me nights, after working hard all day; and when she thought I was asleep I heard her praying for me! Her prayers wasn't out o' the prayer book, but I know the saints heard 'em."

She stopped, and wiped her eyes on the corner of her calico apron. Man though I was, I could have wept with her easily. It went to my very heart to think of doing patiently and secretly such works of mercy. But I was not surprised. I had read the true, earnest nature, the power of self-sacrifice in her eyes. "God bless and keep her!" I said to myself every time I thought of her, and those times were not few.

That day I purchased a Clytie, the fac simile of my own. At night I took it home with me, and wrote these words to go with it.

"Will Miss Hastings permit her fellow boarder to offer her a gift, the acceptance of which will confer much pleasure? Her admiration of the Clytie was so hearty and genuine, that he thinks to possess it may contribute slightly to her happiness."

I rang for Ellen and begged her to take the bust and little note up stairs. Presently she came back bringing with her a few lines written in pencil.

"I accept your gift, as I am sure it was well meant. You have designed to give pleasure to one who possesses few resources for amusement, and be sure that you have succeeded. I thank you more than I can say."

She had received it as I was sure she would, with a simple dignity and gratitude which, had my motives been evil, would have repelled me more effectually than any sarcastic refusal. I respected all women. It was the part of my early training at the hands of the best of mothers; but already I reverenced that young sewing girl more than any woman I had ever seen.

Mrs. Lee puzzled me not a little when we met, as we usually did, in the parlor after tea. One or two of the other boarders were there at first, but presently they went out and we were alone. It seemed to me that her manner toward me was far more like that of a young girl to whom I had been making love, than like a landlady's simple courtesy towards her inmate.

"I am not sure I had better stay here with you," she began. "You do beguile me, as you did last night, in saying such unwarrantable things, revealing all my heart to you."

I was utterly confounded. What had I been doing? I bethought myself of Mrs. Bardell's suit against the respected President of the Pickwick Club, and trembled in my patent leathers. Mr. Weller's advice to Samivel came into my mind, and I answered a little stiffly:

"I had not meant to force your confidence, dear Madam, and I did not know that you had ever said anything to me which the whole world might not properly hear."

Perhaps she thought she had been progressing too fast. She smiled, shook her long, fair curls, and rustled the folds of her black silk. She said I was a naughty man, a very naughty man, to take up things so. Of course she had not said anything to me of consequence; only it was just possible some people might think it a little queer that she had confessed not to have loved Mr. Lee quite so adoringly as he had loved her. But why need she trouble herself, when she knew it would go no further?"

"Of course it would not," I answered. "Anything [illegible] she did me the honor to confide to me was sacred."

Then there was a pause and I felt very awkward. It would be very difficult to say anything more, I thought. But Mrs. Lee did not find it so. Verily the tact of woman is wonderful! In five minutes we had gone back two days, and were talking in the [illegible] our old terms of pleasant, easy familiarity. I was somewhat more absent-minded than [illegible], perhaps, for many of my thoughts were with the little girl in the attic.

It was three days after I had sent her the Clytie before I saw her again. Then I met her on the stairs. It was eight o'clock, or past, in the [illegible]. I was going out after my customary [illegible] Mrs. Lee's parlor, and I met her [illegible] was very pale, and she stepped wearily. She smiled a little, when she saw me, and, stopping, held out her hand.

"You are very kind, Mr. Prescott, and I am more grateful than I can say."

"I only wish," I responded eagerly, "that I could, that you would let me contribute to your [illegible] now and then. You look tired, and I [illegible] to see a young girl like you wearing herself out."

"It can't be helped, sir. I am only too thankful that I have something to do. I need nothing; all my wants are supplied. It is pleasant to feel that I have a friend, and I look on you as one, though I have no claim on you."

"Would to Heaven you had a [illegible] on me?" I thought, as I saw her toiling wearily up the stairs. "Would that she were my sister, my niece, anything that would give me a right to take the work out of her hands and prescribe for her change of air and scenery, and a little pleasure! Then I fell to thinking, as I strolled across the common. What a sad, strange tyrant Custom is. Society would let me do what I pleased for my second cousin [illegible] smile on me if I sent clothes to the Sandwich Islanders, or arithmetics to the Hottentots—but would by no means let me lift the burdens from this poor girl, who was my neighbor, with one of my fingers. I cried out against the absurdity of such a decree. Why must I pile up useless wealth and she suffer? But for her sake I submit to laws I could not change; for her own sake, I must not seek to help her.

"As I came home, though, I did indulge myself so far as to buy a tea rose in full bloom and a pot of heliotrope. They stood in my [illegible] over night, and the next morning I sent Ellen to her with them, and the request that she would take care of them for me. I had taken it on trust that she loved flowers, and I was not disappointed when Ellen came back and told me that Miss Nora was so overjoyed to get them that she almost cried.

I happened to meet her that day as I went up from dinner.

"I have to thank you again," she said earnestly. "I am grateful. The flowers will be such company for me."

I asked her then if she would find time the next afternoon to go and see some pictures with me. It was when the English collection was at the Athenæum, and there was one painting of Hinda, which I longed to have her see. It was the face of one who waited and watched, and somehow I associated it with hers. She could not refuse, she said; it would be such a rare pleasure, she must make time somehow.

While we were talking, Mrs. Lee came through the hall. She nodded to me, but she cast on my companion a look of singular distrust and dislike. I noticed it then and remembered it afterward.

She spoke to me that evening about Nora Hastings. She had observed me talking with her, she had, and would I tell her if I was going to marry her? I might think it a very strange question, one which she had no right to ask, but if I chose to answer it, she would convince me that she had good reasons.

I had no cause for hesitation. The thought of marrying Nora Hastings had never occurred to me, and I told her so frankly. I related to her the beginning of our acquaintance, and its slight progress, including my invitation for the next day. Then I waited her reply.

"I hardly know what to say Mr. Prescott," she began, in her soft, insinuating voice, shaking gently her head; with its long, fair curls. "I am sure it would be kinder to say nothing, and it's not at all necessary, since you do not think of marrying her, Mr. Prescott."

"But what if I had been intending to marry her, Madam?" I spoke a little sternly perhaps, for I had satisfied her curiosity, and I was determined she should make the explanation at which she had hinted. I think she was unwilling to refuse me, still she spoke with hesitation.

"It is nothing at least; if any other gentleman in my family had been going to marry her, I should have said it was nothing, and kept silence; but I have looked upon you as my personal friend, and I should have told you that I considered her an artful, designing girl, who had tried to entrap several of my best boarders into marrying her, and had failed hitherto."

I half wonder that this did not shake my confidence in Nora, but did not for an instant. Her face, her pure, noble face, was her best advocate. It rose before me then, and I replied unflinchingly.

"I am sure, Mrs. Lee, that you must be mistaken. As little as I know Miss Hastings, I would be ready to answer for every act of her life; though she has a frankness and simplicity of manner which might possibly mislead some. I am certain that you do her injustice."

"Let us hope that I do," she said with a smile, "It has [illegible] to be of interest to me, now that I know she is not likely to affect the happiness of one whom I consider my friend."

She diverted the conversation into other channels; but I believe I had been a little vexed by her pertinacity in reminding me that I had assured her I was not going to marry Nora Hastings. I had told her the simple truth when I said that the idea of such a marriage had never occurred to me. But now that she had put it into my head, it did occur to me again and again. I took such an interest in Nora as I had never taken in any one before. Perhaps I could not win her; but if I could—I paused, and strange, sweet thoughts drifted through my mind, of what it would be to be loved and watched and waited for by such love and beauty; to have her altogether my own. How she would love her husband! I mused—she with no other tie in the world! My dreams that night were rosier than any of the hopes of my byegone youth.

We had a couple of pleasant hours the next afternoon, looking at the pictures. Now that I had begun to think of Nora as one who might some day make my world, I saw new charms in her every hour. It was a pleasure to show her works of art. She had seen so few, and she enjoyed them intensely and appreciated them with such fine inborn taste.

It was not the last afternoon we spent together. Oftenest we went to some new bust or picture; but once or twice I persuaded her to let me drive her out into the country, and new life seemed to bound in her pulses, and youthful brightness and hope to tinge her pale face as the trees shook down their odorous blossoms upon her head, and the wind kissed her cheek, and lifted the hair from her brow. I had begun to think of her as mine, and to dream fond dreams of how I would cherish her.

I went home one evening when I had known her two months. I had intended to send for her, as I did sometimes, and ask her to join me in a little walk. I went into my room, and presently Ellen tapped on the door. I opened it and she placed a little note in my hand. She had been crying, and she said, as she gave me the paper: "That'll tell you about it, I suppose, sir. Miss Nora's an angel and nothing else, and I've given the mistress notice. I'm going next week. I won't stay where they're treated her so, poor darlin'."

I tore open the note, and bade Ellen wait while I read it. The handwriting was hurried and irregular; the words went to my heart.

"Mrs. Lee tells me she has let my room to a person who will pay more. I am obliged to go to-day. She intimates that I have lowered myself in your estimation by my forwardness, and that I have lost the respect of the boarders. This may be so, alas! I fear it is. I could bear all else, but to have lost your respect is terrible. You were very kind to me, and it was so sweet to have a friend. Do not think any worse of me than you can help. If I have been forward and presuming it was because I knew so little of life. I shall remember your goodness and be grateful to you forever,

NORA HASTINGS."

My poor, wronged, innocent darling. If I had never loved her before, I should have loved her then, and longed to shelter her from a cold world in my heart.

"Where has she gone?" I asked, turning to Ellen. "She does not tell me."

"She has gone to Mrs. Miles', on Deane street. The lady had given her a good deal of work and been very kind to her, and when Miss Nora found she couldn't stay here, she went to her with her trouble, and so Mrs. Miles said she should stay there till she could look about for a new place."

So there were still some kind hearts in the cold world, I thought gratefully, who could show pity to the orphan and the friendless. God bless them all! But she—my poor little love—should never need to seek another boarding house if she could only love me and let me care for her.

"I am going to see her," I said to Ellen, as she seemed to wait for my comments.

"Bless you, sir! The very sight of you will do her good. She took with her the white head you gave her and the two flower pots. I wish you could see how she's tended those flowers. They never had a dry leaf; and to-day she cries over them enough to water 'em."

I found Mrs. Miles' without any difficulty. I asked for Miss Hastings at the door, and presently she came to see me in the little reception room where I had been shown. She looked as if she had almost wept herself blind.

"You do not despise me, Mr. Prescott, or you would not have come to see me?" Her voice trembled.

"Despise you! Nora, I love you with all the power of loving which God has given me. I have come to ask you to be my wife. You hold my fate in your hands. Will you make me happy or wretched?"

No matter about her answer. She told all my heart craved of her. Looking into her truthful eyes, I knew that she was mine, my young, innocent love!

After a while I sent for Mrs. Miles to come to us. I recognized in her a lady whom I had sometimes met in society, and for whom I entertained a sincere admiration. I told her, in brief, the history of my acquaintance with Miss Hastings, and that I desired to make her my wife with as little delay as possible. Did she think the needful arrangements could be effected in a week?

They should be, she said. Nora should be married in her house, and a week would be long enough to provide all that was immediately necessary. So it was settled.

The next day I gave Mrs. Lee notice that I should vacate my rooms at the end of the month.

I never exchanged one word with her on the subject of Nora's sudden ejection from her house. She had an undoubted right to let her rooms as she pleased. I sent her my wedding cards—it was my revenge.

Three years have passed since, and Nora as bride and wife has been all that I hoped and even more.

HIRAM SMITH'S

Ophthalmic Panacea!

IN BRINGING THE ABOVE-NAMED NEW REMEDY to the notice of the Public, the Proprietor begs to state a few facts in relation to it, as follows:

It originated in Prussia, where the science of Medicine is so thoroughly taught and practiced, but, owing to the poverty of its discoverer its wonderful properties were not known beyond the limited circle of his acquaintance, in which, however, it proved itself absolutely infallible in eradicating disease from the eyes.

He immigrated to this country, bringing his discovery with him, but seems to have been indifferent to the propriety of giving it general and wide-spread circulation, and, as previously in his native country, aimed only desirous of using it among his friends and neighbors.

The present proprietor was one of those neighbors, and for many years was a witness to its wonderful efficacy, and, after ineffectual efforts to persuade the inventor to more widely disseminate the knowledge of its virtues, finally became himself the possessor of the secret of its preparation.

And now, while he does not deny that he hopes and expects to make money by its sale, he must yet lay claim to a desire to benefit his fellows by presenting to them a remedy which does and will cure where medical science and all experience have failed.

He wishes it to be understood that it will cure all diseases of the eye, whether of recent or long standing; but its greatest power is exhibited when it is applied to old Chronic Cases of long standing, which have resisted every other attempt to cure them, and which have been given up as hopeless and past being cured or relieved.

He asks those afflicted in this way to give it a trial, and so confident is he of its success that he instructs all his agents TO REFUND THE MONEY IF IT FAILS TO CURE.

It has, within the past year, cured cases of GRANULATED LIDS, INFLAMMATION, &c., of FIVE, SIX, NINE, FIFTEEN and SEVENTEEN YEARS STANDING, evidence of which fact is furnished in the testimony of the following persons, living at and in the neighborhood of Harrisburg, Linn county:

ALEXANDER L. WALKER was cured of inflamed eyes, of nine years standing. Had been treated by eminent physicians during all that time without effect.

Mrs. MONTGOMERY, of Harrisburg, had inflamed eyes for over two years. For one year they were so bad that she could not work. Was finally completely cured by the Ophthalmic Panacea.

R. B. MOORE, of the firm of Moore, Carol & Baker, of Harrisburg, had granulated lids for six years.

NATHANIEL BELL, of Clackamas county, had inflamed eyes—a bad case—for over fifteen years.

ROBERT RAMPEY and W. D. PORTER, of Harrisburg; JOHN M. HOLLOWAY, of Linn County; C. R. WAND, of Lane County. were all afflicted, more or less severely, with diseased eyes, and were cured by the Ophthalmic Panacea.

All the above named persons have given lengthy testimonials to the facts as above stated; which may be seen at the proprietor's office in Harrisburg.

CARD.

DR. BARLOW J. SMITH'S WATER CURE AND Phrenological Institute, 627 Sacramento Street, San Francisco. This is the only Regular Water Cure in Francisco, where all curable diseases are treated without drugs. Dr. Smith was the first to establish a water cure on this coast, based upon the theory and practice of the New York Hydropathic College.

We have a truly healthful boarding place for men, women and children, and our prices are moderate.

The Phrenological organs plainly indicate the diseases to which any person, male or female, is predisposed.

Put this card in your hat, and when you come to San Francisco, call on Dr. Smith. He will give you consultation and a phrenological examination in regard to health. It will cost you nothing and may save you months and years of ill health and "bad luck."

Dr. Smith gives free lectures to gentlemen every Friday evening, on subjects pertaining to health, at his Phrenological Hall, 627 Sacramento Street.

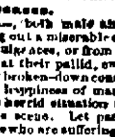
TO THE UNFORTUNATE.

NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES

Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary.



616 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco. Established in 1854, for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of [illegible], both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, or from virus absorbed into the system! Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken-down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life. In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible life-destroying maladies, see that they are cared for and cured before it be too late. Send them immediately to Doctor Gibbon, a physician who has made private disease his especial study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate cases without mercury, or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places. Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse. This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practised by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing, with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical [illegible], viz: Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, a disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, feted breath, coughs, consumption, night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity. If relief be not obtained, should apply immediately, either in person or by letter, and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr. G. will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks.

MARRIED MEN,

Or those who contemplate marriage, who are suffering under any of these fearful maladies, should not forget the sacred responsibility resting upon them nor delay to obtain immediate relief.

TO THE LADIES.

The various complicated and distressing diseases incident to females, treated with eminent success. Such as Suppressions, Irregularities, Whites, Falling of the Womb, Tumors, all Urinary Diseases, Nervous Debility, Painful or Difficult Menstruation, Barrenness, etc., will be speedily cured, without poisonous drugs, injuries or unpalatable medicines of any kind. Have no delicacy in calling, no difference what your troubles may be. The afflicted are cordially invited to call and satisfy themselves.

Persons calling at Dr. Gibbon's office or sending for packages of medicines, may rely upon his assurances of confidential secrecy with implicit faith, and expect no more than to be charged with a fair, and mutually satisfactory remuneration for services rendered, considering the circumstances and difficulties of cases, rather than a too prevalent and selfish practice of extortion among quacks and pretenders.

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure, or make no charge.

CURED AT HOME.

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Dr. Gibbon, stating case, symptoms, length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded, free from damage and curiosity, to any part of the country, with full and plain directions for use, for Ten Dollars, sent in registered letter or through Wells, Fargo & Co.

Address DR. J. F. GIBBON, 616 Kearney street, corner Commercial, San Francisco. Post Office Box 252.

REMEMBER TO PUT BOX 252 ON THE LETTER.

Consultations FREE.

Correspondents will please inform DR. GIBBON that they read his advertisement in the Daily Oregonian

DR. J. C. YOUNG,

Medical and Surgical

INSTITUTE.

⁂ CONSULTATION, IN ALL CASES, FREE.

⁂ CURES GUARANTEED, OR NO PAY REQUIRED.

⁂ IN ALL CASES WHERE CONFIDENCE IS REQUIRED THE UTMOST SECRESY MAINTAINED.

The above rules, established by Dr. J. C. Young in 1850, and which have done so [illegible] to secure the reputation of this Institute, are still adhered to, affording those in need of medical aid, the certainty of cure and the utmost confidence.

There is nothing of so great importance to the sick as to know where to find a physician whose skill and [illegible] will give assurance of prompt [illegible] delicate treatment. The Doctor would respectfully call the attention of those of both sexes who are suffering or in [illegible] to the invariable success [illegible] has marked the career of the Institute in the seventeen years of its existence.

It is unnecessary in this connection to enumerate all the complaints treated at the Institute, but the Doctor feels it his duty to call especial attention to that terrible scourge,

SEMINAL WEAKNESS,

That is sapping with its insidiousness the very life of the victims; in the [illegible] cure of which the Institute has [illegible] so enviable a reputation.

READ! READ!

I am aware that by dwelling upon so [illegible] ject as the decay of manly vigor through the loss of the vital principle of life, the ignorant may [illegible] tive; but the desire to point out to the [illegible] who [illegible] guish and decay, the true cause of their [illegible] too great an [illegible] to be forced into abeyance. [illegible] tended the terrible [illegible] of Seminal W[illegible] one but the practical specialist who [illegible] treatment can tell; but its [illegible] can be [illegible] by the most inexperienced by noting the [illegible] toms; Weakness of the back and [illegible] feelings, loss of [illegible] power; [illegible] cold feet or hands, [illegible] by hot [illegible] breath; [illegible] sion to society; [illegible] of the [illegible] nightly [illegible] colorless; slight [illegible] least excitement; trembling; palpitation of the [illegible] regular appetite; variable temper, etc.

YOUNG MAN, if you experience any of the symptoms enumerated above, pause to [illegible] present is the golden moment [illegible] in which you may [illegible] health and happiness. You may feel [illegible] but if you have ever practiced the vice of [illegible] SECRET DISEASE, you have the seeds of [illegible] system, and their [illegible] will, [illegible] or later, dash the fair edifice of your [illegible] ground, leaving you a helpless [illegible] that [illegible] itself at [illegible] out dangers for while the [illegible] is being [illegible] affection of the Heart, Lungs, Brain, or Di[illegible] tions, he sinks into a general debility that commends him to the list of the victims of the terrible [illegible] Weakness.

See in the bent form and languishing [illegible] the victim of the [illegible] vice! Mark the [illegible] of the destructive complaint in the [illegible] and dull eye.

Drowsiness is one of the [illegible] symptoms. At first it is easily [illegible] off, but it grows [illegible] into a great disinclination to pursue his [illegible]. The mind bec[illegible] ive, and restless [illegible] days of depression.

It is the nature of the complaint to [illegible] changes that leave the poor victim but little hope of recovery. In a single instant it may wither your fond [illegible] and blast your [illegible] aspirations.

Marriage is sought by a natural impulse as a hope of relief. This is an error of the first magnitude, for [illegible] tem, unp[illegible] for the [illegible] of the [illegible] suddenly fails, and he finds [illegible] If in a [illegible] from which there is but the slightest hope of [illegible]. Or if the marriage should result in offspring, they are puny, distorted, [illegible] and [illegible]. This is [illegible] ble to both sexes, whether married or single, and in all times of life.

Do not delay if you feel any of the symptoms of the terrible complaint, or if your acts have been such as to lead to them, but by [illegible] only hope of health and happiness. The Doctor uses no mercury or [illegible] deleterious drugs, [illegible] in time, always guaranteed, and full and [illegible] restored.

The afflicted are [illegible] of every [illegible]

PERSONS AFFLICTED WITH VENEREAL.

During the seventeen years since the [illegible] of the Institute, the number of cases of V[illegible] that have been treated, show a record unsurpassed by any [illegible] in the world, and the [illegible] that has [illegible] the [illegible] of treatment.

Without Mercury or other Deleterious Drugs,

Shows conclusively the use of them to be [illegible] called for, but actually dangerous, for it is a [illegible] established medical principle that those [illegible] by entering the blood, ruin the constitution and [illegible] life.

The Doctor effects a cure in recent cases, in a few days, and finds no difficulty in curing those of long [illegible] without [illegible] fitting the patient to such treatment as will draw upon him the slightest suspicion, or [illegible] him to neglect his business, whether in-doors or without. The diet need not be changed. Cures always guaranteed, or no pay required.

IMPORTANT TO FEMALES.

When a female is in trouble or afflicted with [illegible] and requires medical or surgical assistance, the inquiry [illegible] be, "Where is there a physician competent to [illegible] relief, and whose respectable standing in society will recommend him to the confidence of the community?" The Doctor, understanding how imperatively [illegible] these requirements are, feels called upon to intimate, and by calling the attention of the afflicted to the fact that he has been a Professor of Obstetrics and Female Diseases for twenty years, and is fully qualified to administer to all both medically and surgically, not in a superficial [illegible] but in as thorough a manner as years of study and practice—both in hospitals and private families—can make, to save them from the hands of the unqualified, unscrupulous or designing. Therefore, families can rely upon him as upon a father. All in affliction can find in him one who can feel and sympathise with and befriend them in trouble, and in whose secrecy the utmost confidence can be placed. Consultation by letter or otherwise, free. Cures [illegible] teed in all weakness and trouble incidental to the sex. Private apartments are provided, when desired, [illegible] be had all the advantages of unremitted attention of the Doctor, and the most skillful and faithful [illegible].

To Correspondents.—Persons, either male or female, residing in the interior, are often deterred from [illegible] the Doctor because they cannot spare the time, nor incur the expense of a visit to the city. To such he would say that a plain statement of the symptoms and [illegible] of bearing upon the complaint, will enable him to prescribe for them so that they can be cured at home. None need have any false delicacy about writing, no matter what the nature of their complaint, as the communication will be seen by no one except the Doctor, and will be treated with the utmost confidence, and either be returned or destroyed.

Consultation Free.
